The application shall comply with the guideline produced by NSW Health – Guidance on Burying a Body on Private Land – Public Health Regulation 2012 (document number GL2013-016).

Extract of guideline provided below:

1.1 Public Health Regulation 2012

Clause 66(1)(c) of the Public Health Regulation 2012 (the Regulation) provides that “A person must not place a body in any grave or vault unless that grave or vault is located on private land where the area of landholding is 5 hectares or more and the location has been approved for that purpose by the local authority.”

Further, clause 66(2) states “A person must not bury a body in or on any land if to do so would make likely the contamination of a drinking water supply or a domestic water supply.”

1.2 General

It should be noted that the local authority is not approving of each instance of burial; rather it is approving of the burial location.

2 LEGISLATIVE EXPLANATIONS

Both the applicant (when preparing and submitting an application) and the local authority (local council) in determining an approval for a location for burial of a body on private land, should note the following requirements under the Regulation.

2.1 Landholding

The total landholding must be equal to or exceed five hectares.

This is a requirement of the Regulation and cannot be reduced. Burial on smaller landholdings cannot occur.

2.2 Geotechnical Report

A geotechnical investigation may be considered if there is any likelihood of contamination of ground waters and/or surface waters. It will also determine the suitability of the location in regard to the depth of soil, and the water table.

Clause 66(2) of the Regulation prohibits burial where it is likely to contaminate a drinking or domestic water supply. A drinking water supply means a water supply which is, or could be, used for internal ingestion or consumption, food preparation or ablutions (showing, cleaning of teeth, etc). A domestic water supply means a water supply used for domestic purposes (apart from drinking) such as clothes washing and toilet flushing. A geotechnical report can give an indication of ground water movement and water tables, even in dry times. Further, an indication of the soil depth and underlying substrate will enable both the proponent and the council to be aware of problems, such as rock outcrops or rock floaters that may be encountered in digging a grave to a suitable depth.

2.3 Burial of bodies

Bodies must be buried at a minimum depth of 900 millimetres.

Under Clause 64 of the Regulation a person who buries a body contained in a coffin must place the coffin so that its upper surface is not less than 900 millimetres below the natural surface level of the soil where it is buried.

2.4 Bodies to be placed in coffins

Bodies must be placed in coffin prior to burial.

Under Clause 63 of the Regulation bodies must be placed in a coffin and the lid of the coffin must be securely sealed. Approvals may be granted upon application to the Director General, Ministry of Health for exemptions under this clause of the regulation.
